

What is the difference?

Having children is a traditional goal in most societies, since this is the way the human race continues to survive. But, with the overpopulation of the planet that modern civilization has brought about, and all the poverty and suffering that entails, perhaps remaining childless is really the best contribution we can make to the world.

VOCABULARIES

Entails- To have, impose, or require as a necessary accompaniment

Distinction- A making off or distinguishing as different

Overpopulation- To fill with an excessive number of people, staining

Civilization- An advanced state of human society, in which a high level of

Questions for discussion:

1. What are the distinctions between these two attitudes?
2. How can the government decrease the population?
3. Is being childless a solution?