

WOLVES

James Bishop is traveling to Alaska with nineteen other boys to study wolves and the evolution of the wolf. James was chosen from over five hundred children to go on the expedition. James, who is twelve, has been to Alaska before. The boys are going with two zoologists and a camera crew. They are going to camp in the forest. The boys will follow the wolf pack and study the hunting habits of the wolf. "It's the first expedition of its kind!" James told a reporter.

A few months ago, some very interesting fossils were found in Alaska

Think they were the bones of early wolves. The boys are going to look for more fossils. "Studying fossils is interesting," says James. Why was James chosen? "I'm interested in paleontology. And I've camped in wild places lots of times before. But I don't know anything about wolves. I've never read any books about real ones- only the one in fairy stories..

COMPREHENSIVE QUESTIONS:

1. Where is James going?
2. What are they going to study?
3. Why was James chosen to go with the expedition?
4. Does James know something about wolves?
5. Who are the boys going out with?
6. Have he read about stories of real wolves?