

Why Forest Are Important

Forest is very important to people. Many different kinds of plants and trees grow in the forest. People get wood for fuel and lumber for houses from the forest. They get food from the plants and trees. They also get other things like rubber, wax, rattan, and bamboo from the forest.

Flooding is prevented through the help of plants and trees. They take in water through their roots. Dead leaves cover the ground. When it rains, the leaves on the ground and the roots hold the soil in place. Water can then carry very little soil down the mountainside.

Forest is also the home of many animals and birds. Most of these animals and birds help man.

Questions:

1. What is the paragraph all about?
2. What can you say about the present conditions of most forest nowadays?.
3. How can you show your love for the nature?
4. What do you think will happen if there were no forest elsewhere?